To the entire university community:

Today marks the beginning of a new academic cycle at Albizu University. Although current circumstances do not allow us all to congregate in the same space, we are united by the hope and desire to have a productive and, above all, healthy semester.

The start of academic work at our Institution fills me with great satisfaction and pride. Our community has worked hard over the past months to address multiple challenges, and today those challenges have made us stronger. We begin the academic year with new skills and abilities that allow us to continue our academic offering remotely.

To our incoming students and those returning to continue their studies, I urge you to stay focused and committed to your respective curriculums and professional development. Our society needs capable and sensitive leaders and professionals in the face of today's human, social and cultural realities. . You are the future and Albizu University is ready to be the vehicle that will accompany you on your journey. Welcome to all!

We have no control over natural disasters or pandemics that come our way, but we can control how we overcome the obstacles they create and grow in the face of difficulties.

Cordially,

José Pons Madera, PhD
President
